

Helen Radice

Harpist

Helen Radice graduated with a first from Oxford in 2000, and is now a second-year postgraduate harpist at the Royal College of Music where she studies with leun jones. She gained a distinction in her first-year postgraduate diploma. Her most recent competition successes are the Thames Valley Young Musicians' Platform 2000, where she won the audience vote, and was selected for further promotion by the judges, and the Oxford Music festival, where she was placed in the 'outstanding' class.

Helen enjoys orchestral work as much as solo appearances, for example with the Northern Junior Philharmonic, the London Junior Philharmonic and the Durham Sinfonia. Concerto appearances include those by Mozart and Handel. She is also an active chamber musician, particularly in a flute and harp duo with Catherine Goodman. She frequently participates in access and education projects, performing in nursing homes, hospitals and schools.

Helen is a highly experienced player at all types of functions, weddings, corporate entertainment, etc. She offers classical, light classical and popular selections, tailored to suit the client. Requests can usually be accommodated with advance warning, and where possible on spec!
