

Minstrel Musicians

Duo - 9 piece

Based around husband and wife team Tony and Jane, the group is often augmented by other regular players to form a duo, trio, quartet or even a nine piece band.

They embrace music from the courts of Medieval Europe to the Palaces of Tudor England, from village festivities to the stage of William Shakespeare.

They perform anything from gentle background music to lively dance tunes, lyrical ballads to melifluous madrigals, creating a tapestry of sound that adds just the right atmosphere to any occasion.

They play on a wide range of fascinating instruments including Lute, Crumhorn, Flute, Racket, Shawm, Psaltery, and of course the Nakers - it is a double drum, honest !

They not only play music, they also entertain with a combination of comic verse, juggling competitions, tests of strength and all manner of courtly fun.

Above all they will provide an evening tailored to your exact needs from the formal to the informal.

Take advantage of their experience and talk to us, we can advise and help with all aspects of your event from décor to menus, serving wenches to costume and Jesters

Something that makes our Minstrels unique is the number of instruments they play, at the last count it was around forty but they are always adding to their collection.

Even if you book as a duo they still come with the full compliment of instruments. The picture here shows some of the main ones.

From the plain song of the early middle ages to the complex polyphony of the late renaissance the human voice has been a major contributor to both religious and secular music.

During the medieval period, the voice was the only instrument allowed to be heard in church.

"Thanks for making our wedding so special and remarkable; many people have commented to us how much they enjoyed your contribution . . . it certainly added a lot to our day." Chris Chapel, Wedding at Innkeepers Hall, City Of London.

"Thank you so much for your wonderful music. Your beautiful melodies certainly added much to the atmosphere of relaxed enjoyment." Fran Andel, Lakeside Birthday Party, Bedfordshire.

"Thank you for your superb performance at my wedding - everyone really enjoyed it." Nancy Connor, Wedding at Silchester House, Berkshire
