

Victoria Armstrong

Angle Grinder / Fire Eater / Dancer

Dancer on ITV's 'Britain's Got Talent', featured on 'This Morning' and GMTV

Victoria was born in Salford, Greater Manchester in 1977. Her heritage is an exotic blend of European and Native American (Cheyenne).

She grew up with a deep interest in dance and drama, joining several dance groups and performing in pantomimes at Salford's 'Lancastrian Hall'.

After leaving college, Vicky became a professional dancer in major nightclubs all over the UK and Europe.

After a break bringing up her son, Oliver, she returned to the club scene with several seasons in Ibiza.

She taught herself to 'Angle Grind' shortly afterwards. Vicky is also proficient at fire eating and stilt walking, plus she's a fully trained trapeze artist.

She's even had a snake act with fully grown boa constrictors!

She's appeared on CD covers and in commercials for several major products.

When Oliver started junior school Vicky trained as a beauty therapist so that she could spend more time at home. Up to her appearances on 'Britain's Got Talent', Vicky ran a successful mobile business from her home in Swinton.

Her latest gig following her TV appearances was at the CADS07 Music Vision Awards, performing her dazzling 'angle grinder' act for the music video industry's producers and directors.

Victoria is a dancer / fire eater / angle grinder whose act involves shooting sparks 20 feet from various parts of her body!

While her act is sexy, to quote Simon Cowell from ITV's 'Britain's Got Talent' "she has a 'likeability factor' that appeals to both men and women". She is able to work in the UK or abroad and is a seasoned professional, with experience on TV, stage, clubs and conference events
